SINGLE ESTATE BLACK TEAS

Assam Teas

Assam tea is what we Brits associate with a typical breakfast tea. Because of the full-bodied richness, these teas drink extremely well with breakfast foods such as ham, bacon and smoked fish. All our Assam teas are single estate, meaning they originate from only one tea garden and have not been blended with any other tea.

Assam Bargang

From the Bargang tea estate this tea is a broken second flush Assam. Assam broken teas are ideal for those who like a strong tea as they are more robust than our whole leaf Assam teas.

Offers a powerful infusion; it is best enjoyed with milk and makes a nice breakfast tea.

Assam Mokalbari

A superior quality Assam. It is a large whole-leaf second flush Assam with lots of golden tips. The young golden tips in Assam tea are a sign that the tea is of a very high standard.

Smooth and light with lots of aroma. It makes a lovely afternoon tea with a dash of milk and is considerably lighter than our Assam Nahorhabi and Assam Bargang.

Assam Nahorhabi

From the Nahorhabi tea estate this tea is a broken second flush Assam, similar to Assam Bargang. It is ideal for those who like a strong tea. The difference between this tea and Assam Bargang is that it is full of fine golden tips; a sign of superior quality.

Malty and sweet in flavour and lingers in your mouth! It makes a great breakfast or afternoon tea and is best enjoyed with milk.

Darjeeling Teas

Darjeeling teas are known for their fine, subtle, flowery taste and aroma. This is all due to the unique combination of the cool, misty climate, elevation, rainfall and the quality of the soil and air. Darjeeling produces two main pickings each spring – first flush and second flush.

Darjeeling Barnesbeg – First Flush

A first flush Darjeeling of superior quality.

In appearance Darjeeling Barnesbeg has large, brightly coloured green leaves and produces an elegant, aromatic, soft cup of tea. Flavours of muscatel grapes are apparent in this tea and it is best enjoyed black.

Darjeeling Namring Upper – First Flush

A first flush Darjeeling of premium quality.

These large, green leaves produce a fresh, fruity, balanced taste. This tea is best enjoyed black.

Darjeeling Margaret’s Hope – Second Flush

A highly prized tea from the world-famous Margaret’s Hope tea estate.

Compared to the first flush, it produces much darker green, sometimes almost black leaves resulting in a stronger, more mature taste. It offers a pleasant, mellow, flowery flavour. Best enjoyed black.

Darjeeling Marybong Autumnal

Our autumnal Darjeeling. After the Monsoon come the autumnal teas that maintain the Darjeeling characteristics but give a darker, amber-coloured liquor that has a smoother, more rounded, mature flavour with a little more body.

These tea leaves are dark brown in appearance, much darker than the first and second flush Darjeelings. They produce a copper coloured, full bodied, smooth and flowery tasting tea.

Sikkim Temi First Flush

Also known as the ‘Ancient Kingdom of Sikkim’, this small tea growing area is north of Darjeeling and borders Tibet, Nepal and Bhutan. The only tea garden here is Temi and the teas produced here are similar in character to Darjeeling, but are fuller bodied and fruitier.

These greeny brown leaves give a fruity, deliciously fragrant tea, with an almost honey like flavour. Best enjoyed black.
